Moisture Ants

Moisture ants may be noticed when the reproductive winged insects swarm out of a nest or they may be noted by an inspector on a home or pest inspection. Sometimes an area (such as behind a shower) will be opened and the honeycombed wood is apparent.

The ants are usually attracted to the moist wood and are feeding on the fungus – not eating the wood. The primary solution is eliminating the moisture problem and replacing any damaged wood.

Treatments may be necessary when the nest is not accessible or when the open nest is very active.
