Carpenter Ants

Carpenter ants are a major pest in the Pacific Northwest and are considered wood-destroying. The good news is they rarely do extensive structural damage and they often build up over several seasons before being a major problem.

They can be safely eliminated with exterior treatments in most cases. Occasionally it may be necessary to drill into a wall where a nest is obvious. It is not necessary to drill holes all around your house and we do not believe it is a good idea to inject all of your walls with insecticide.

Routine service is usually the answer as the ants will be present in the outside environment. Carpenter ant control is included in our routine monthly service.
